The First Performances Will Be Given To-Morrow-General Theatrical Notes-Musical Notes,

The Park Theater will open for the season to-morrow afternoon. There is a large sale of seats for the first performance of Dickson & Mustard's "The World," which is to be the initial attraction, and will be presented twice each day throughout the

The original production of "The World" was seen at Wallack's Theater, New York, in 1881, with Robert B. Mantell, Charles Thorne, Roland Reed and other popular actors in the cast. Following this engagement, which continued for more than 100 nights, the play was on the road two or three seasons. When the firm of Brooks & Dickson, which controlled the piece, was dissolved some years ago it fell into the hands of James B. Dickson, who has been carefully guarding his rights with a view to a big revival whenever conditions seemed be propitious. Mr. Dickson and his partner, some extent and absolutely new scenic and mechanical effects built expressly for it on a more elaborate scale than that maintained in the original version.

World" is a romantic spectacular drama, collaborated by the well-known English playwrights, Paul Merritt, Henry Pettitt and Augustus Harris. It belongs to "Lights o' London," but is declared by competent critics to be better than either of those plays. It is in five acts, with eight tableaux. The story opens in Cape Town, Africa, and shows for the first time or of the now famous South sea its environments; painted from graphs taken on the spot. The great From Cape Town the action shifts to the ship "Lily of the Valley" on its way to Liverpool, and excitement is furnished by the explosion of an infernal machine bogus diamonds, heavily insured. The great "raft" scene comes in the third act, said to be exceedingly thrilling and realistic. The fourth act shows the exterior and interior of a private insane asylum, and the fifth act, with its accompanying tableaux, reveals the Grand Hotel, London, which is the scene of a murder; also a river retreat, and finally a "pal-

ADVERTISING RUN MAD.

Protest Against Unsightly Monstrosities to Be Seen Everywhere.

New York Evening Post. In the June number of Municipal Affairs Mr. John De Witt Warner writes on "Advertising Run Mad." His theme is the display of enormous and unsightly signboards and flashlights for advertising purposes in all possible places in city and country. His illustrations are drawn from all countries, including Ceylon and the England, yet even there a limit is placed to fights and the like. Then came the world's contractor. A flashlight man had made his arrangements to throw advertisements on the Nelson column in Trafalgar square, when the vestry interfered and prevented him from carrying out his plan. Another man erected a sign on Ludgate hill of such huge dimensions that he cut off the view of St. Paul's Cathedral from an important district of London. He was compelled by the public authorities to take it down. The sacred precincts of the Royal Exchange have been invaded by advertisers of patent medicines. Even the hull of Nelson's old battleship, the Foudroyant, has borne the advertisements of a pillmaker. Sir Lepel Griffin records that his eyes were offended at beautiful bit of rock scenery on the upper Mississippi bearing the announcement that 'Smith's Chewing Tobacco is the Best.' He acknowledges, however, that England can give points to America in abuses of advertising. Mr. Warner's article is enriched by half-tone engravings of many

AUTOBIOGRAPHY

YOUNG HOOSIER HUMORIST TALKS OF HIMSELF BY REQUEST.

How He Drifted Into Newspaper Work and Subsequently Became a Writer of Books.

George Ade, in Philadelphia Book News. The first impulse of any modest man is to refuse to write an autobiography. He doesn't like to say things about himself. If he must be classified and set right before the public it is better that someone else should accept the responsibility for son, after it has first been rearranged to the job-preferably a friend. Usually, the suit American tastes by H. Grattan Donfriend will say the things that the subject of the biography wants to have said, but doesn't care to say in his own name. Then some day he can write an estimate of the friend, and thus there will be two exploitations without any savor of advertise-

> In the present instance I do not call to mind any friend who might be depended upon to treat the subject with seriousness, and, furthermore, as the editor's request is that I shall tell something about myself, there are but two courses left open so as to insure publication or else I must decline, blushing figuratively. If I decline, I may be passing the opportunity of a lifetime. Never before have I been asked to write about myself. The chance may not come to me again. So, after momentary hesitation, I accept your courteous invitation. The information you desire fol-

I was born at Kentland, Ind., on Feb. 9, 1866. Kentland is eighty miles south of Chicago and only four miles from the Illinois State line, so that I came very near not being born a Hoosier. My father was born at Lewes, Sussex, England, and came to this country when he was thirteen years anniversary. Father is a banker. As long ago as 1852 he managed a bank at Moroc-Bank of North America. If I have any sense of humor, it is inherited. AFTER LEAVING COLLEGE.

The town of Kentland, which held me for seventeen years, is on the level prairie. It is in the great corn belt overlapping from Illinois. After finishing in 1887 I studied law for seven weeks and then hired out to a morning newspaper in Lafayette. It was a new Republican organ, begun in 1887, so as to have a long running start toward the campaign of 1888. Before the nominations were made in 1888 the Morning News had passed away. I remained with the patent medicine concern until June, 1890, writing advertisements, dictating correspondence and superintending the dispatch of large quantities of mail matter. In odd moments I wrote for college publications. All the time I was determined to get back into the newspaper business. My friend and college-mate, John T. He became a war correspondent, and followed all the good fighting in the Philippines. He is now in South Africa. In 1898 I revised and welded together great many stories relating to the Alfafa Hotel Colony of Chicago, and Mr. Stone published them under the title of "Doc' Horne." The book did fairly well. Last year, while providing two or three stories a week for the Record department I arranged with the publishers to get out a freakish little book of "Fables." dealing with modern instances, archalc in appearance, told in the vernacular of the ment, without pretense of dignity and yet containing enough truth to save them from the contempt of the serious-minded. PALMAREALCO

OF PITTSBURG

With a Paid-up Capital of $1,500,000.00

Growers of Coffee, Rubber, Sugar Cane and Tropical Fruits.

WHAT THE PALMA REAL COMPANY IS AND DOES.

Situated in the State of Vera Cruz, in the Republic of Mexico, lies one of the richest and most productive sections of the great Isthmus of Tehuantepec, in which is located the Palma Real Co.'s great estate of 68,000 acres of choice tropical plantation land, having over fifteen miles of navigable river frontage and innumerable creeks, which not only perfectly drain the land, but afford a cheap and easy means of transportation. The land runs back to the Sierre Madre Mountains, which are the same quality of soil as those of Cordoba (the old coffee field in Mexico), 93 miles from this plantation. Competent experts, thoroughly familiar with tropical agriculture, state that the soil of the company's property will yield bountiful crops for 100 years.

A GARDEN FOR THE WORLD'S USE There is not the slightest doubt that immense profits are derived from the cultivation of rubber, coffee, cocoa (chocolate), vanilla, fruits of all kinds, corn, beans, cattle, etc. Plantations already brought to maturity have been steadily yielding enormous crops, the net profits on the investment ranging from 50 to 100 per cent. in the last three years.

WHAT WE PROPOSE DOING. We propose raising the different products on a large scale. The lands of the Palma Real Co. and of the investors will make it one of the largest plantations in the world. We propose to erect large sugar refineries, coffee mills and other machinery plants that would be a benefit to the enterprise. We have located the town of Palma Real at the junction of the Teechoacan River and the Vera Cruz and Pacific Railroad, which is now being constructed, and will be completed to our property by the last of the year, and will open this entire section of land by railroad to the Mexican local markets.

The Palma Real Co. will be able to handle and sell the entire output of this vicinity, putting it on the market in such a manner as to command a high and permanent price. We shall enlarge the commercial and transportation department and eventually raise or manufacture everything consumed on the plantation.

It must also be borne in mind that the plantations sold by the company will be laid out and cared for from the beginning in the best possible manner. Each tree will be given every advantage in the way of high cultivation, scientific pruning and tapping, all of which affects both the quality and the quantity of the crops. The good faith of the company and its confidence in the tracts realizing
